Stories of Bryte look to one another

By Travis Blaschek-Miller
PRESS STAFF EDITOR

Students, parents and teachers gathered at Bryte Elementary School last Tuesday night to watch students read aloud biographies written by the students.

The students wrote the biographies about important people in their lives as a part of the California Writing Project, a program used by second grade teacher Mrs. Imamoto and third grade teacher Mrs. Bauer. Students from both classes stood on stage and read aloud the biographies written about a grandpa, a dad, a mom, a friend and a grandma.

Nancy Zatarain, a student in Mrs. Bauer's third grade class, volunteered her biography of her grandpa, West Sacramento resident Don Sanderson.

My Grandpa, Donald Andrew Sanderson, is a good man. He was born in 1927 in Detroit, Michigan. He grew up in New York. When my grandpa was 50 he was in a way fighting different people. Now my grandpa does not live in New York, now he lives in California. Now my grandpa is 77. His favorite color is green. His favorite holiday is Thanksgiving and his favorite food is turkey. He loves the United States of America. He likes to play poker. My grandpa's favorite animals are cows and rabbits. I like these animals too.

My grandpa says, "Things cost more now than they did then, especially gasoline for cars." My grandpa is a good man.
